BRONCHO PETE LOOSE.

He Cleared Out a Car in The Burlington Station.

Burlington, Aug. 3.—The police gathered in an individual Saturday night after he had attempted to make a special train for himself by driving out all the passengers.

The intoxicated gentleman, wearing a wide brimmed, black, felt hat, sailed into the depot and then tacked into a car of the waiting train. After declaring that he owned the railroad, the cars and all the rolling stock he commenced to playfully slap the passengers in the face, smash their hats and exhortate tobacco juice at the passengers' luggage. In a moment the car was as barren of passengers as Middlebury is of automobiles and the man who was doing the Broncho Pete stunt looked for other fields to conquer. During this time one fat man, who had become wildly excited, attempted to leave the car by way of a window. He became stuck, however, and he could move neither to larboard or starboard; all he could do was to yell. After taking a man's at and performing other curious feats the creator of the disturbance was collared by Officer Short-sleeves. The man put up a hard fight and it took three men to get him into a cab. At the police station Assistant Chief Ryan joined the party and helped put the wild and woolly man into the jail.
